Since the development of tree culture, the forests of Europe have increased from one-sixth to one-fifth of the entire territory.

An English manufacturer advertises that his safety matches may be eaten by children with positive benefit to their appetite and digestion.

Along the New England coast, the Queen Anne style of summer cottages is being superseded by the Dutch style of the seventeenth century.

A Greekologist has detected a strong resemblance between the language of the hill tribes in northern India and of the Basques, or Basquandians, of Spain.

Spain has lost one of its most popular dramatic authors in Senor Garcia Gutierrez, who has just died at Madrid. He wrote the play from which Verdi drew "Il Trovatore."

A large whale became entangled in a submarine cable near Panama, and in its efforts to extricate himself was so severely injured by the wire that he died the same day.

The Shah of Persia, in return for the courtesies shown to him while in Paris, has presented the municipality with two camels of a variety no larger than Shetland ponies.

In Mount Morris, Mich., a family believing its members to be bewitched by an old woman in the neighborhood, killed the wares of all its pigs and cows to drive out the devil.

The blue pencil in journalism has more than a counterpart in China, where the red, or vermilion, pencil is synonymous with the exercise of the highest official authority.

The death is announced at Buenos Ayres of Nicholas Anthonio, who has left $12,000,000. He owned an enormous pastoral property, which carried 152,000 cows and 400,000 sheep.

A sample of American cheese in London when analyzed proved to contain neither milk nor any of its derivatives. Its chief ingredients were lard and coloring matter. It came from New York State.

Dr. James Collins Browne, the inventor of chlorodyne, died in England on August 30. He was in about his sixty-sixth year, and was known in the scientific world for his experiments in the construction of yachts on the principles of the fish's tail.

Dr. Koch recommends acid drinks during cholera epidemics. A chemist says in this regard that the workmen in violent manufactures, who use as a beverage diluted sulphuric acid sweetened with sugar or molasses, have never been known to be attacked by the disease.

The list of modern books which are not to be allowed in the public libraries of Russia includes translations of works by Agassiz, Bagehot, Huxley, Zola, Lassalle, Lubbock, Locky, Louis Blanc, Lewis Lyall, Marx, Mill, Rodin, Adam Smith's "Wealth of Nations," and "Theory of Moral Sentiments," and Herbert Spencer's works.

Prof. Woodward, of the manual Training School of St. Louis, believes that industrial training should form a recognized part of the educational functions of the school as surely as mathematics or geography, "but by no means with the inevitable or expected sequence that every boy who receives it shall become a carpenter or a blacksmith."

The twenty-six public libraries of Paris circulated last year five hundred and fifty thousand volumes, and three hundred and six thousand were novels. If poems and plays be added, it is found that three hundred and seventy-seven books of light literature go out for every ninety-seven treatise of history, geography and travel, and every fifty-five science and art.

The latest spiritualistic apparatus consists of a telephone diaphragm attached to the sounding-board of a piano, and connected by a wire to a second piano in the immediate neighborhood. Music played upon the latter is reproduced upon the former, but more sweetly and delicately than when originally played. The device was detected in Providence after a very remunerative month's run.

The Digger Indians were, until a few years ago, considered the most ignorant and least intelligent human beings on the Pacific Coast. Those who live on Rancho Chico have now been educated in civilized ways. They have learned to read and write almost as well as white people, and some of them have even become musicians. They recently gave an entertainment in San Francisco, under the care of their instructors. Sunday school hymns, national songs, and other musical and metrical compositions were rendered by their choir in a very felicitous style.

The seal fisheries in the northwestern part of Alaska are controlled by the Alaska Commercial Company. The contract stipulates that not more than 100,000 seals a year shall be killed, for which the company pays the Territory an annual fee of $50,000, besides two dollars for each skin shipped from the Territory, and fifty cents a gallon for seal oil; also, that the company shall annually furnish free to the inhabitants 25,000 dried salmon, sixty cords of firewood, a sufficient quantity of salt, and to maintain such public schools as are needed. All others are prohibited from killing in Alaska any other, mink, marten, sable or fur seal.

SAN LAPPIN. The Kansas Styker Who Abused His Office by Robbing the People Captured.

TOPEKA, Kas., September 23.—Until very recently no one knew that a requisition had been quietly issued by Governor Glick for the arrest and return to the State of San Lappin, who had recently returned back into the borders of the United States. In fact, very few people had any suspicion that he was in the United States until the news of the requisition was published. Lappin is in Washington Territory, staying with the man who assisted him to break jail at this point, and in all probability is in custody of the officers before this time. He has been a fugitive from justice since the summer of 1876. The crosshairs for which he was wanted were shown while he was in the building.

FRAUDULENT FAILURE. Serious Charges Against a Louisville Firm. A Bank Ruined in Western Ontario.

LOUISVILLE, September 25.—The late developments in the failure of the Newcomb-Buchanan Company were almost the sole topic of conversation in business circles yesterday. This morning the officers of the various banks that held the defunct firm's paper have been quietly looking up matters to see how much they have been caught for, if anything. It is not unusual to see these officers chiding waitresses with bundles of receipts for the purpose of comparing the paper with the actual supply. The counting rooms of the Newcomb-Buchanan Company were closed to the public and the following notice posted this morning: "This office is closed for an examination of the books. For information call on the Fidelity Trust and Safety Deposit Company." The checks were all inside, and the books were all outside. The late afternoon a reporter saw Mr. E. G. Halsey, manager of the Fidelity Trust Company, who said: "I have some very duplicate warehouse receipts, to what amount I am not prepared to say, but this much I can state: The probabilities are that this man will be a gentleman. We are not working on a particular case, but taking as we find. The amount of work before us is enormous, and it will require time to properly still be of late. There are 75,000 barrels of whisky, and it is all in warehouses. We will have to check off the whisky before it can be ascertained. There will be trouble. This matter stands. Undoubted evidence of fraud has been discovered, but to what extent cannot be stated. The evidence is all in the hands of the officers of the various banks.
